Thank you. Through the community bins hosted by our local partners, neighbors and families gave generously, and every pound collected from them was weighed and recorded. Here is what those bins gathered between September 1 and October 1.

What the community bins collected

Where it goes next

Goods are already reaching children and families: 433 items have gone directly to 4 nonprofit partner organizations serving children across Martin County and neighboring communities. What remains is sorted for the next partner delivery and, once it opens, our planned Collective Kids Closet, a nonprofit store that will offer affordable children's goods to everyone in our community, with proceeds supporting those same children.

Why this matters

A bag of outgrown clothes or a toy that is no longer played with can be exactly what another family needs this month. Reuse keeps goods out of the waste stream, and it keeps generosity close to home. This is a community supporting its own families.

What's ahead

Our community donation drive continues through the fall, with pickups every week. Next month's report will include new totals and the growing number of partner organizations served.

Bin totals reflect weighed pickups from bin hosts only. Items contributed to partners are counted by unit and also include goods received from other sources, including new items provided by CCOF.

Thank you for helping connect our community's generosity to the kids who need it most.
